

CONTENTS

- 03 Introduction
- 06 Key findings
- 20 Detailed findings

Introduction.

Black voters continue to play a decisive role in shaping election outcomes, yet surveys that center their experiences remain rare, especially at the state level.

For several years, In Our Own Voice: National Black Women's Reproductive Justice Agenda has invested in rigorous research to better understand the views, needs, and priorities of Black adults across the country.

In 2017, during the early days of the first Trump administration, we explored attitudes among Black adults related to race, policy, and reproductive justice.

After the 2020 election, but just before President Biden took office, we returned to the field to understand how Black communities were experiencing and responding to the policy landscape.

Leading up to the 2022 midterm elections, we conducted national and state surveys among Black women voters to understand their values, policy concerns, and responses to dominant issues in the news, such as the overturning of Roe v. Wade.

In spring 2024, we surveyed Black women nationally and across nine states to understand their perspectives heading into another high-stakes presidential election year.

Now, several months into the second Trump administration, we're back in the field exploring how Black communities think and feel about the new policy environment. We set out to understand their daily lives, their struggles, and their expectations for American life under the Trump administration. We also delved into the kind of future they imagine for their families and the specific barriers they say are getting in the way.

The goal of this research is to offer insights for policymakers, journalists, advocates, and others seeking to understand Black communities' experiences, values, and priorities at this time.

This report provides findings from a statewide survey among n = 519 Black adults ages 18 and older in Ohio. The survey was conducted May 27 through June 15, 2025. Ipsos administered the survey using a combination of their probability-based KnowledgePanel and off-panel, opt-in sample. The data are weighted to reflect a representative sample of Black adults in Ohio. See the next page for a demographic profile of survey respondents.

This survey is part of a larger project that surveys Black adults in a total of ten states.

Here is the demographic composition of the survey respondents.

	Weighted %	Unweighted N
Total	100%	519
Black or African American	100%	519
2+ races	11%	36
Hispanic / Latina/o/x	3%	19
Women	54%	303
Men	46%	204
Non-binary / transgender	1%	5
Prefer to self- describe	0%	1
Prefer not to say	1%	7
18 to 29	24%	105
30 to 44	30%	135
45 to 64	32%	178
65+	15%	101

	Weighted %	Unweighted N
HS or less	46%	195
Some college	34%	213
College +	20%	111
Less than $25K	27%	196
$25K to $50K	17%	121
$50K to $75K	23%	103
$75K+	32%	99
Democrats	46%	292
Independents	43%	181
Republicans	10%	46
Metro	97%	508
Non-metro	3%	9
Not available	0%	2

Key findings.

Here are 11 key findings.

1

Data suggest more than half of Black adults in Ohio are struggling with economic insecurity.

Fifty-seven percent say they have less than $500 in savings, and 48% say they don't have enough money to pay for basic needs like food and housing. Economic stress is a near daily reality—53% report worrying about their financial situation every day or several times a week.

The burden is heavier for women of reproductive age. More than half (58%) of women 18 to 44 can't afford basic needs right now and 66% feel financial stress every day or several times a week.

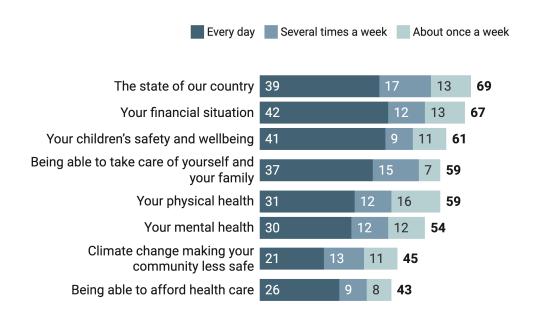

There's a lot of worry.

Majorities of respondents worry at least once a week about the state of our country and various aspects of their families' physical and financial wellbeing.

Two-thirds (66%) say they worry "every day" about at least one of these issues.

How often do you worry about...

RANDOMIZE

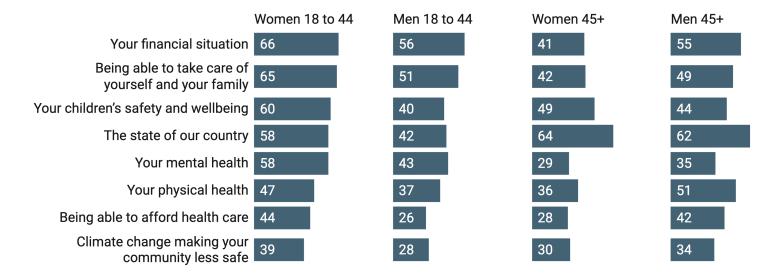

How often do you worry about...

RANDOMIZE

% Several times a week or more

Younger women face the widest set of worries.

Black adults expect things to get a lot worse under the Trump administration. Respondents expect things to get worse on some of the issues they already worry about most—such as economic security. They also think racial injustice, threats to democracy, and access to reproductive care will worsen over the next four years.

Pessimism crosses gender, age, and other demographic lines. That said, women and older men are most likely to anticipate harmful outcomes of the Trump administration.

See next page.

EXPECTATIONS FOR THE NEXT FOUR YEARS UNDER THE TRUMP ADMINISTRATION

Do you think...

The cost of living will go up	78 11	The cost of living will go down
There will be more racial discrimination	71 9	There will be less racial discrimination
It'll get harder to get quality reproductive health care	66 11	It'll get easier to get quality reproductive health care
Black people will lose rights	66 10	Black people will gain rights
Fewer students will learn about Black history	64 12	More students will learn about Black history
I will feel less safe, secure, and free	63 13	I will feel more safe, secure, and free
It will get harder for Black people to stand up for their civil rights	61 12	It will get easier for Black people to stand up for their civil rights
There will be fewer Black people in positions of power	59 12	There will be more Black people in positions of power
We'll lose our democracy	56 43	Our country will stay a democracy
Trump's policies will negatively affect Black people	54 14	Trump's policies will positively affect Black people
Your income will go down	40 24	Your income will go up

Medicaid cuts may disproportionately impact Black adults. Seven in ten respondents (69%) say they or a family member has had Medicaid coverage at some point in their lives. For many Black adults in Ohio, it's a vital resource. Nearly all who've received Medicaid (94%) say it's been important to them or their families, including 77% who say it's been "very important." Yet access remains a challenge for some—29% report having had trouble finding a provider who accepts Medicaid.

Respondents who have enrolled in Medicaid are more likely than others to be under financial pressure right now: 60% say they don't have enough money to cover basic needs like food and housing.

There's a gap between the desire to have children and the intention to do so.

Half of respondents ages 18 to 44 (52%) say, ideally, they'd want to have (more) kids in the future. However, just one in three (32%) plan to do so.

We explored what might be holding back those who want kids. Topping the list are economic roadblocks and "being able to take care of myself or my family as it is now." Majorities also cite the state of the country, racism, and their mental health.

TOP DECISION FACTORS FOR WHETHER OR NOT TO HAVE A CHILD

- How much money I or my partner makes (71% of 18- to 44-yearolds say this is part of their thinking about whether or not to have a child)
- Being able to take care of myself or my family as it is now (70%)
- Housing prices (70%)
- Food prices (70%)
- Health care prices (67%)
- The state of our country right now (66%)
- Childcare prices (64%)
- The state of my mental health (58%)
- Racism (54%)

Systemic racism is a barrier to health, stability, and raising healthy families.

Black adults in Ohio view systemic racism as a force shaping daily life and access to opportunity.

Nearly six in ten (58%) say society's systems are set up to give white people more opportunities than Black people (vs. 29% who say systems are set up for equality).

More than half (54%) of respondents report exposure to environmental toxins, such as unsafe water and air, at some point in their lives.

Addressing systemic racism is seen as essential for helping Black families thrive. A large majority of respondents (86%) say dismantling systemic racism is extremely or very important to building a future where Black families are healthy, safe, free, and financially secure.

Women of reproductive age face significant barriers to reproductive justice.

Throughout the data, we find that women ages 18 to 44 have the least security, freedom, and opportunity to raise healthy children if they choose. Men also face barriers, but not as many or to the same degree.

The next page summarizes these obstacles. All percentages reflect Black women respondents ages 18 to 44.

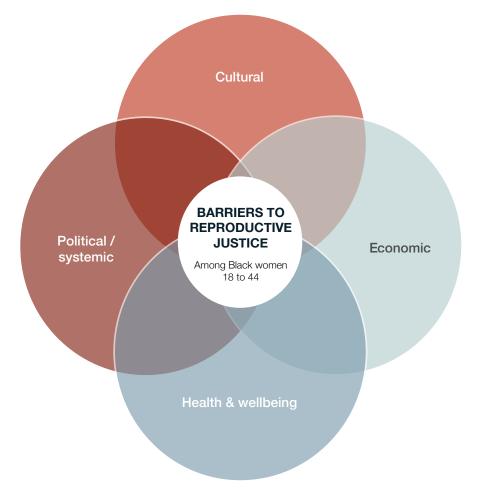

Majorities recognize an adultification (67%) and sexualization (57%) of Black girls in society 72% say it's very important for Black women to be visible in media and culture 70% say representation affects how they are treated 61% expect Black people to lose positions of power during the next four years

73% think they'll feel less safe, secure, and free under President Trump

In the next four years, majorities think:

- Racial discrimination will increase (80%)
- Black women will lose rights (76%)
- It'll be harder for Black people to stand up for their civil rights (71%)
- We'll lose our democracy (70%)
- Fewer students will learn Black history (69%)

58% say systems in US are set up to give white people more opportunities than Black people

69% worry at least once a week about their mental health
77% think it'll get harder to get quality repro care under the Trump administration
59% say their risk of death in pregnancy is a decision factor for having kids
49% say possible criminalization is a decision factor for having kids
44% have relied on Medicaid at some point
39% have felt a health care provider(s) didn't take their concerns seriously
60% have experienced unhealthy water, air, or environmental toxins

Most (58%) don't have enough money to pay for basic needs like food and housing

65% have less than $500 in savings

77% worry about their financial situation at least once a week

83% expect the cost of living to increase in the next four years and they expect their own income will go down (46%) or stay stagnant (28%)

52% want (more) children, but just 30% plan to have them

Top decision factors in whether to have a child:

- Salary / wages (75%)
- Housing prices (74%)
- Food prices (73%)
- Health care prices (73%)
- Childcare prices (73%)
- Being able to care for self / family as is (70%)

Black adults see many policy solutions that could help them thrive.

When asked what it would take for Black families to thrive, respondents point to a wide range of policy priorities—but especially clean water, dismantling systemic barriers, and economic concerns.

TOP POLICY NEEDS

Let's say we wanted to create a world where Black people are free to raise healthy children, if they choose. In your opinion, how important is each of these things to creating a world like this?

- Making sure everyone has access to clean water (73% extremely important)
- Dismantling systemic racism (68%)
- Increasing job opportunities that pay a livable wage (66%)
- Having equal pay in the workplace (65%)
- Getting rid of racial disparities in health care (64%)
- Increasing affordable housing (63%)
- Decreasing the risk of drug and alcohol abuse in Black communities (63%)
- Improving access to healthy and affordable food options (63%)
- Improving access to quality, affordable health care (62%)
- Improving access to affordable childcare (62%)
- Improving access to affordable higher education (61%)
- Improving access to affordable mental health care (61%)
- Protecting the right to vote in future elections, without barriers (61%)
- Improving access to quality public schools (61%)
- Increasing support for women who face intimate partner violence / sexual violence (60%)

Large majorities support abortion rights, access, and personal decisions.

Majorities across demographic groups support abortion rights and access, including those who attend religious services regularly.

Four in ten (41%) respondents ages 18 to 29 say they know someone who has had an abortion in the past year or two.

73%

Say abortion should be legal in all or most cases

Including 69% of those who attend religious services regularly

88%

Say the person(s) involved should decide when and how someone can get abortion care

86%

82%

Agree: Each woman should have the right to make her own decision on abortion, even if I may disagree with her decision

83%

81%

Agree: When it comes to abortion, I trust Black women to make the personal decision that's best for themselves

83%

Representation of Black women matters.

Nine in ten (89%) respondents say it's important that Black women are visible and positively portrayed in our culture and media.

Why does it matter? For many reasons, but particularly because representation shapes how Black people are treated.

Why does having Black women voices in culture and media matter to you? Select any that apply.

RANDOMIZE UP TO DOESN'T MATTER

	Total	Women
Representation shapes how we're treated		63
Black women push for justice		59
Black women tell stories others ignore		48
It helps me feel seen		46
It doesn't matter to me	12	6

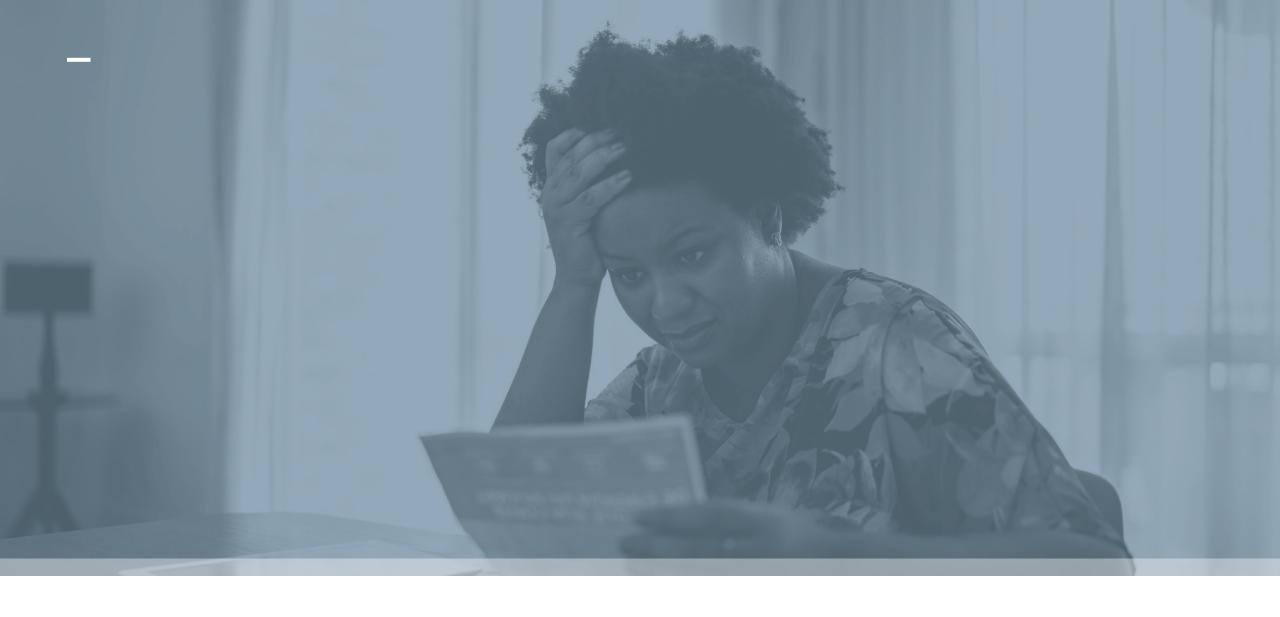

Detailed findings.

SECTIONS

- 22 Daily economic and emotional pressures
- 28 Outlook on life during the second Trump term
- 41 Needs and aspirations for healthy families
- 53 Views on reproductive health policies
- Respect, representation, and changing norms

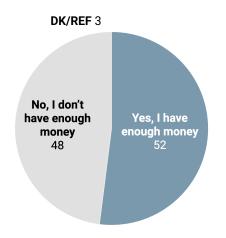

Daily economic and emotional pressures

Half of Black adults in Ohio are struggling with little to no economic security.

Half (48%) say they don't have enough money to cover basic needs, and 57% have less than $500 available for an emergency expense.

Do you have enough money to pay for all of your bills and basic needs, like food and housing? How much money do you have set aside that could be used for an emergency?

Women of reproductive age and those without a four-year degree are most likely to be financially insecure.

	Don't have enough for bills and basic needs	Under $500 in savings
Total	48	57
Women	51	62
Men	42	50
18 to 29	52	56
30 to 44	54	68
45 to 64	46	49
65+	31	55
Women 18 to 44	58	65
Men 18 to 44	45	58
Women 45+	44	59
Men 45+ (n = 82)	39	41
HS or less	58	67
Some college	47	59
College+	25	32
Democrats	49	59
Independents / Republicans	47	55
Attend rel. services monthly+	38	53
Attend rel. services less often	55	63
Registered to vote	43	55

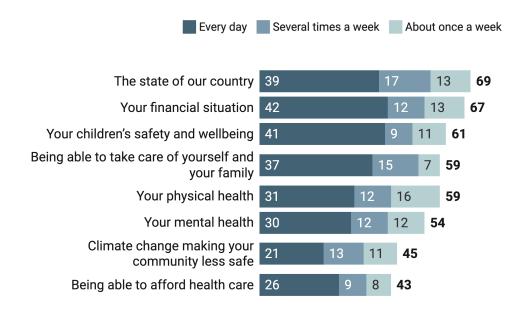

There are many worries on people's minds—including the state of the country.

Majorities worry at least once a week about the state of our country and their families' financial and physical wellbeing.

How often do you worry about...

RANDOMIZE

Women are more likely than men to face worries about their children and the state of the country.

Younger adults worry more than older adults about their financial status.

How often do you worry about...

RANDOMIZE

% At least once a week

	The state of our country	Your financial situation	Your children's safety and wellbeing	Being able to take care of yourself and your family
Total	70	68	60	59
Women	73	70	64	60
Men	65	66	55	57
·		·
18 to 29	71	76	48	58
30 to 44	62	74	71	72
45 to 64	71	64	62	58
65+	81	53	55	38
Women 18 to 44	75	77	66	72
Men 18 to 44	54	72	53	57
Women 45+	71	62	63	47
Men 45+ (n = 82)	78	59	56	58

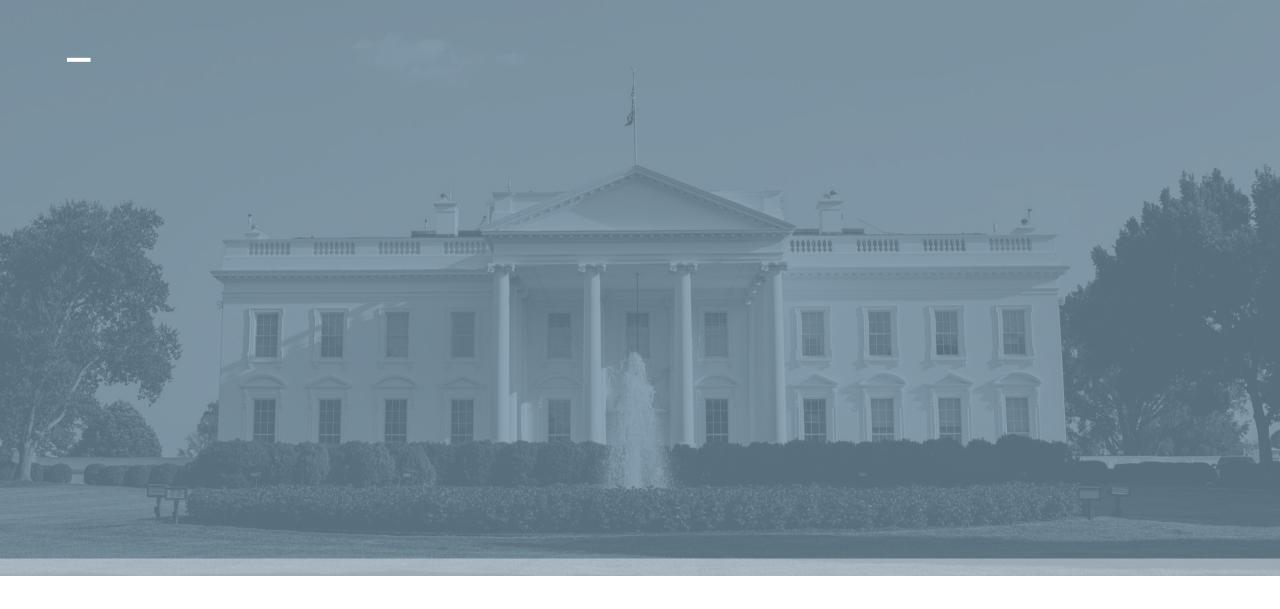

Younger women are more likely than their counterparts to worry about their health, health care costs, and climate change.

How often do you worry about... RANDOMIZE

% At least once a week

	Your physical h	nealth	Your menta	l health	Climate cl making yo communi	Being able health car	e to afford e
Total	59		54		45	44
Women	59		55		47	46
Men	58		52		41	40
18 to 29	57		67		58	42
30 to 44	62		61		43	48
45 to 64	60		50		43	42
65+	52		31		34	42
							_
Women 18 to 44	67		69		58	53
Men 18 to 44	50		56		36	35	_
Women 45+	50		41		36	39
Men 45+ (n = 82)	67		47		46	46

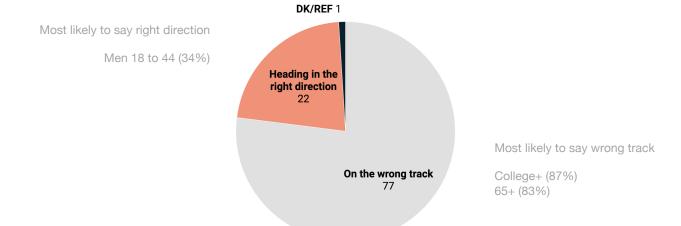

Outlook on life during the second Trump term

Six months into the Trump administration, three in four respondents (77%) say the country is on the wrong track.

Majorities across demographic groups say the country is on the wrong track, with older respondents and college-educated respondents most likely to express this view.

Would you say things in the country are:

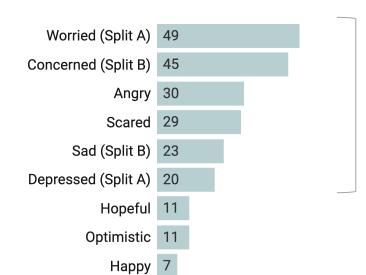

Most respondents (70%) feel negatively about Trump winning the election.

Just one in five (22%) respondents express a positive sentiment about the election outcome.

How do you feel about Donald Trump winning the election?

RANDOMIZE UP TO NONE

Relieved 5

None of these 10

70% say one or more

77% Women 62% Men

67% 18 to 44 73% 45 and older

More than half (54%) expect Trump's policies to negatively affect Black people.

Just 12% of respondents think Trump's policies will positively affect Black people, including 15% of Black men.

Women and older men are most likely to foresee singularly negative effects on Black communities.

About six in ten men ages 18 to 44 think Trump's policies will have positive effects (21%), both negative and positive effects (40%), or will not affect Black people (1%).

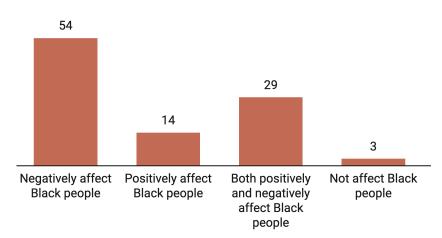

In general, do you think President Trump's policies will:

ROTATE FIRST TWO

59% Women 46% Men

62% Women 18 to 44 39% Men 18 to 44 57% Women 45+ 56% Men 45+

More than six in ten (63%) expect to feel less safe, secure, and free under a Trump administration.

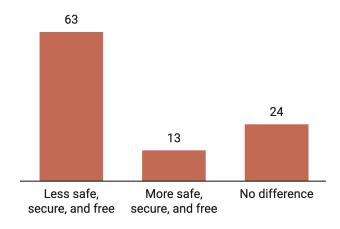

Women are more likely than men to expect greater insecurity under President Trump (72% v. 53%).

A majority of men ages 18 to 44 think they'll either feel more security (23%) or won't feel a difference (31%).

Think about the next four years under President Trump. Do you think you will feel:

ROTATE FIRST TWO

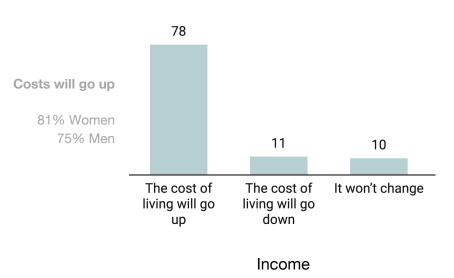

Most (78%) expect the cost of living to rise over the next four years, without an increase in their own incomes.

In fact, four in ten (40%) expect their incomes to go down during the next four years.

In the next four years under President Trump, do you think:

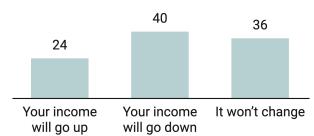

RANDOMIZE PAIRS AND ROTATE WITHIN PAIR

Cost of living

Income will go up

23% Women 26% Men

Majorities also foresee backward trends across health care, civil rights, and democracy.

In the next four years under President Trump, do you think: RANDOMIZE PAIRS AND ROTATE ITEMS WITHIN PAIR

				Worrt Criarige
There will be more racial discrimination	71	9	There will be less racial discrimination	19
It'll get harder to get quality reproductive health care	66	11	It'll get easier to get quality reproductive health care	22
Fewer students will learn about Black history	64	12	More students will learn about Black history	24
It will get harder for Black people to stand up for their civil rights	61	12	It will get easier for Black people to stand up for their civil rights	26
There will be fewer Black people in positions of power	59	12	There will be more Black people in positions of power	27
We'll lose our democracy	56	43	Our country will stay a democracy	N/A

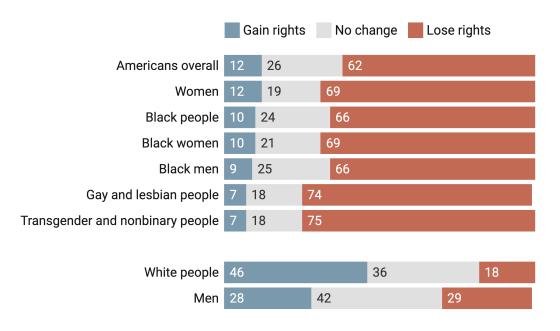

Won't change

Black adults think many people, including themselves, will lose rights under President Trump.

They see men and white people as likely to keep or gain rights under President Trump.

Under President Trump, do you think these people will gain or lose rights?

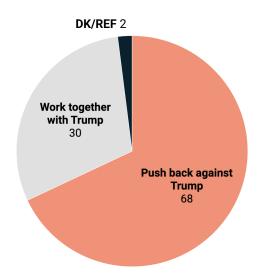

About two-thirds (68%) say they'd want their elected officials to push back against President Trump.

In general, do you want your elected officials in Congress to:

ROTATE

Many Black families in Ohio see Medicaid as a vital resource.

The program isn't perfect—three in ten (29%) say they or a loved one has had trouble finding a provider who accepts Medicaid.

69%

Say they or a family member has had Medicaid coverage at some point in their lives (43% self; 40% family member) 94%

Of those with a connection to Medicaid say the program has been important to them or their loved ones—77% say it has been "very important"

Among n = 381 respondents who say they or a family member has had Medicaid 29%

Say they or a family member has had trouble finding a health care provider that takes Medicaid

Among n = 381 respondents who say they or a family member has had Medicaid

One in four (26%) say they've worried about themselves or a family member being deported unlawfully.

One in three (35%) respondents ages 18 to 29 say they've worried about deportation.

As you may know, the Trump administration is deporting undocumented immigrants.

Have you worried that you or a family member might be deported unlawfully?

26%

74%

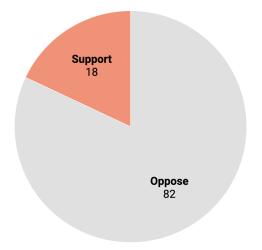

Yes, I've worried about this

No, I haven't worried about this

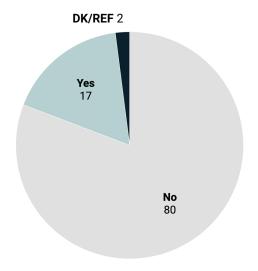

A majority (82%) opposes Trump's pardons of people convicted of January 6th crimes. As you may know, President Trump pardoned people convicted of crimes related to the Capitol riot on January 6th.

Do you support or oppose Trump's pardons?

Most (80%) don't think President Trump would handle Black-led protests fairly. Do you think President Trump would handle Black-led protests fairly?

Needs and aspirations for healthy families

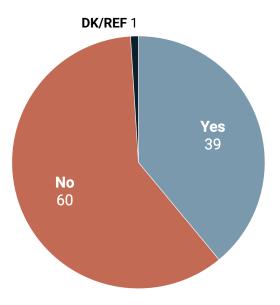

Do Black adults in Ohio have the security, safety, and freedom required to raise healthy families if they choose?

Fewer than half say yes (39%).

Imagine this. You have enough money to pay bills, with plenty left over. You and your family are able to be physically and mentally healthy. You feel safe in your community. You have the freedom to raise healthy families, if you choose to. You feel safe, secure, and free wherever you go.

Do you have a life like this now?

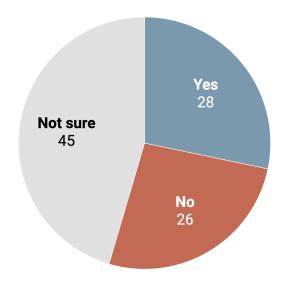

Fewer than three in ten (28%) are convinced their children will have a life like this.

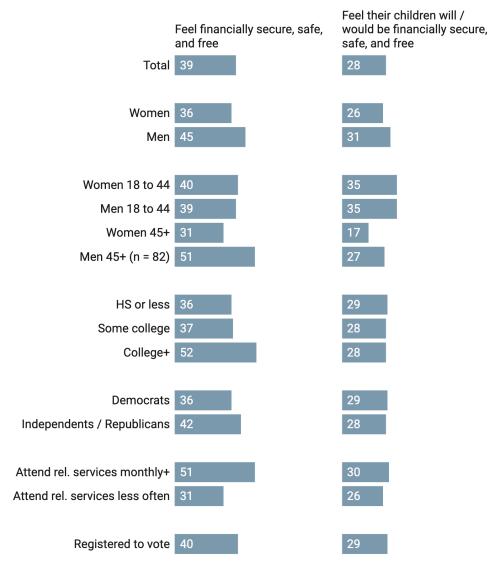

Respondents aren't necessarily pessimistic, however. Close to half (45%) are not sure.

Do you think your children will have a life like this? IF NO KIDS: If you were to have children, do you think they'd have a life like this?

Women are less likely than men to feel financially secure, safe, and free.

There's a big gap between wanting children and planning to have them.

In an ideal world, 52% of respondents of reproductive age (18 to 44) say they'd want children in the future. But just 32% plan to have them.

There does not appear to be a notable gender difference between men and women.

In an ideal world, would you want to have [any / any more] children in the future?

Do you plan to have [any / any more] children in the future?

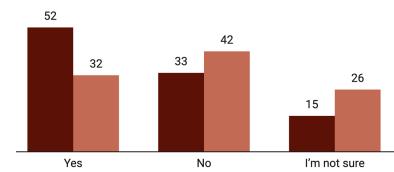

Among n = 240 respondents ages 18 to 44

Plan to have kids 30% Women 18 to 44 35% Men 18 to 44

Data suggest there are many barriers holding back people who want kids.

Economic barriers, "being able to care for myself or my family as it is now," and "the state of our country right now" are among the considerations for a majority of respondents of reproductive age.

Are any of these things part of your thinking about whether or not to have a child?

RANDOMIZE | Among n = 240 respondents ages 18 to 44

% Yes, part of my thinking

How much money I or my partner makes	71
Being able to care for myself or my family as it is now	70
Housing prices	70
Food prices	70
Health care prices	67
The state of our country right now	66
Childcare prices	64
The state of my mental health	58
Racism	54
Climate change / the environment	48
The risk of death if I or my loved one gets pregnant	46
Being able to get health care if you had a miscarriage	44
Being charged with a crime for having a miscarriage or being suspected of ending a pregnancy	33
Abortion bans	30

% Yes, part of my thinking

Ages 18 to 44

Data show women balancing a broader set of considerations than men, including conditions emerging from abortion bans.

For example, majorities of women of reproductive age say the risk of death during pregnancy (59%) and access to miscarriage care (64%) factor into their decisions about having children. Half (49%) have considered the possibility of criminalization for a miscarriage or pregnancy loss.

Across domains, 18- to 29-year-olds are more likely than their counterparts to weigh a wide range of factors when deciding whether to have children.

	Women	Men	18 to 29	30 to 44
How much money I or my partner makes	75%	67%	82%	61%
Being able to care for myself or my family as it is now	70%	72%	75%	66%
Food prices	73%	69%	80%	63%
Housing prices	74%	66%	82%	59%
Health care prices	73%	62%	76%	60%
The state of our country right now	74%	59%	78%	57%
Childcare prices	73%	56%	71%	59%
The state of my mental health	60%	57%	69%	49%
Racism	59%	49%	66%	45%
Climate change / the environment	57%	38%	60%	38%
The risk of death if I or my loved one gets pregnant	59%	30%	55%	38%
Being able to get health care if you had a miscarriage	64%	22%	51%	39%
Being charged with a crime for having a miscarriage or being suspected of ending a pregnancy	49%	13%	34%	31%
Abortion bans	43%	15%	36%	26%

What would it take to create a world where Black families are healthy, safe, free, and financially secure?

We asked respondents to imagine a world where Black people are safe, secure, and have the freedom to raise healthy children, if they choose (see text at right).

We then asked how important various policies are to achieving a world like this.

Respondents rate nearly every policy area as important to building a world where Black families thrive. See next page.

Presented to respondents

Imagine this. You have enough money to pay bills, with plenty left over. You and your family are able to be physically and mentally healthy. You feel safe in your community. You have the freedom to raise healthy families, if you choose to. You feel safe, secure, and free wherever you go...

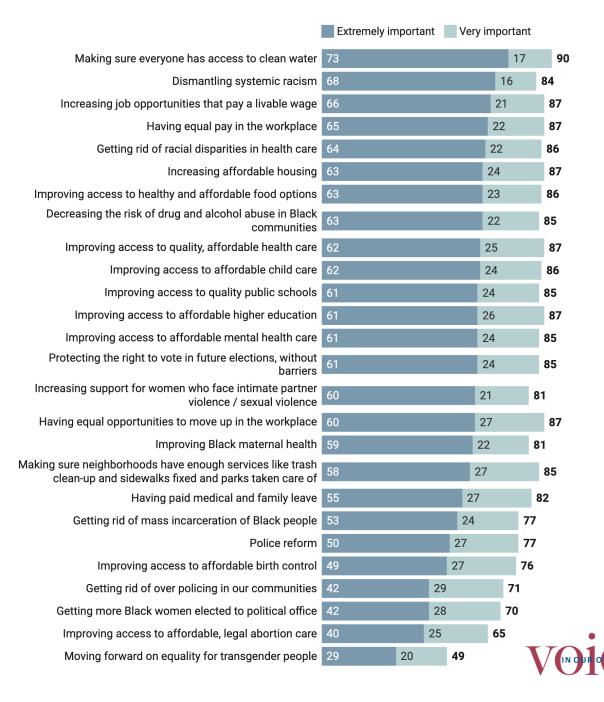

Let's say we wanted to create a world like this. We want a world where Black people are free to raise healthy children, if they choose. In your opinion, how important is each of these things to creating a world like this?

See next page....

In your opinion, how important is each of these things to creating a world like this?

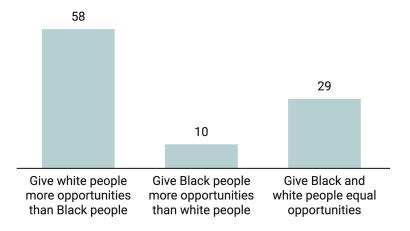

Clean water, a more equitable society, and economic opportunity are among the most important.

A majority of respondents (58%) say systems in the US—that are critical for raising healthy families—are set up to give white people more opportunities than Black people.

Think about the systems in our society, such as school systems, health care, housing, food, banking, and the government.

In general, do you think these systems are set up to:

Many have experienced the results of these systems, such as a lack of clean water and air.

More than half (54%) have had at least one experience related to unhealthy water, air, or environmental toxins.

Have you ever:

% Yes

RANDOMIZE

to breathe	33
Had to boil water at home before drinking it	32
•
Had brown water come out of the taps in your home	28
home	28

Had water come out of the taps in your home that smelled or tasted unsafe

Had to live in a neighborhood that was near toxic things, like chemicals or hazardous waste

Yes to any 54

Yes to any related to water 45

Additionally, one in three (32%) say they've felt discrimination in the doctor's office.

Have you ever felt that a health care provider did not listen to you or take your concerns seriously because of your race?

32%

67%

Yes

No

33% Women 30% Men

Views on reproductive health policies

Three in four (73%) say abortion should be legal in all or most cases. Which comes closest to your view.

Abortion should be:

73%

25%

Legal in all or most cases

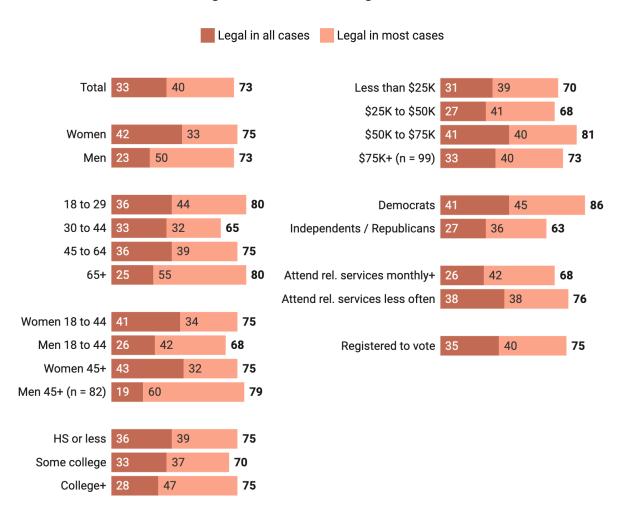

33% All cases 40% Most cases Illegal in all or most cases

4% All cases 20% Most cases

Majorities across every demographic group think abortion should be legal in all or most cases — including those who attend religious services regularly.

Which comes closest to your view: Abortion should be legal in all cases, legal in most cases, illegal in most cases, illegal in all cases

Black adults in Ohio prefer that decisions about abortion rest in the hands of the people involved.

Just eight percent think state lawmakers should be making these decisions.

In your view, who should make decisions about when and how someone can get abortion care in your state? Select any that apply:

RANDOMIZE

Large majorities want people making their own decisions and agree that health insurance should cover the range of reproductive care.

82%

Agree: Each woman should have the right to make her own decision on abortion, even if I may disagree with her decision.

62% Strongly agree 20% Somewhat agree

> 86% Women 78% Men

81% 18 to 44 84% 45+ 81%

Agree: When it comes to abortion, I trust Black women to make the personal decision that's best for themselves.

54% Strongly agree 27% Somewhat agree

88% Women 73% Men

81% 18 to 44 81% 45+ 81%

Agree: Whether she has private or government funded health coverage, every woman should have coverage for the full range of pregnancy-related care, including prenatal care and abortion.

57% Strongly agree 24% Somewhat agree

87% Women 75% Men

83% 18 to 44 79% 45+

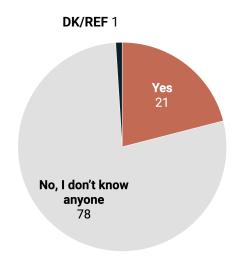

One in five (21%) say they know someone who has recently had an abortion.

Four in ten (41%) respondents ages 18 to 29 say they know someone who has had an abortion in the past year or two.

Do you know anyone who has had an abortion in the past year or two?

RANDOMIZE

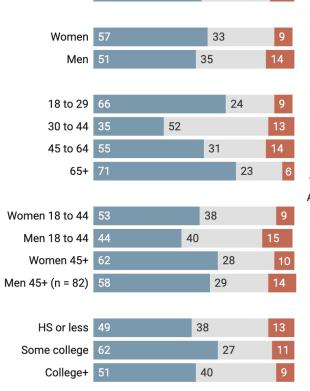

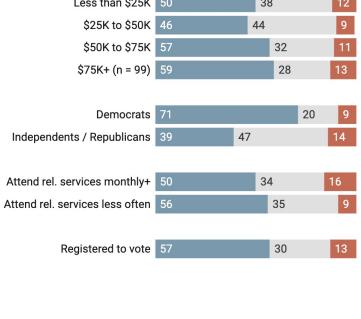

Respondents are much more likely to vote for candidates who support abortion access than those who oppose it.

Are you more likely to vote for a candidate for state legislature who _____ access to abortion:

ROTATE SUPPORTS / IS AGAINST

Close to nine in ten (87%) support comprehensive sex education in high school.

Do you support or oppose comprehensive sex ed in high school that covers topics such as abstinence, birth control, abortion, preventing HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases, different sexual orientations, gender identity, sexual violence, consent, and healthy relationships?

87%

12%

Support

Oppose

89% Attends rel. services monthly+

Three in four (76%) agree that health care providers should create space for conversations about sexuality, including sexual pleasure.

Do you agree or disagree: Our health care providers should create space for education and non-judgmental conversations about sexuality, genderaffirming care, and sexual expression, including how we can experience pleasure.

76%

22%

Agree

Disagree

76% Attends rel. services monthly+

Respect, representation, and changing norms

Many respondents recognize an adultification (58%) and sexualization (60%) of Black girls in our society.

Women are more likely than men to recognize messages around adultification.

In a society that centers white people, there can be many false messages about Black people.

Do you think our society _____?

% Yes

58%

60%

Sees Black girls as more adult-like and less innocent than white girls

63% Women 51% Men

59% 18 to 44 56% 45+ Assumes more Black girls are sexually active than white girls

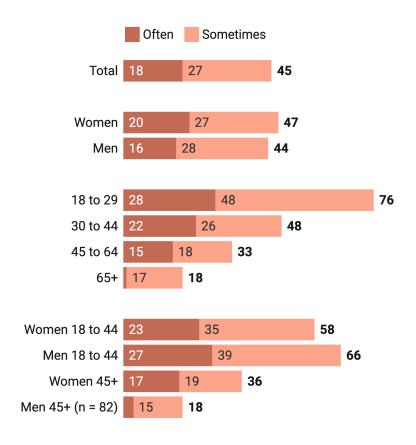

61% Women 57% Men

56% 18 to 44 64% 45+

Three-quarters (76%) of respondents 18 to 29 say they were told growing up that they look older for their age.

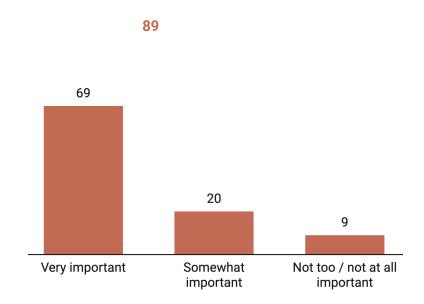

When you were growing up, how often were you told that you look older for your age?

Nearly all (89%) say it's important for Black women to be visible and positively portrayed in media.

How important is it that Black women are visible and positively portrayed in our culture and media (in entertainment, news, talk shows, etc.)?

Why is representation important?

Many reasons – but especially because it shapes how people are treated. Six in ten (59%) women also point to Black women pushing for justice.

Why does having Black women voices in culture and media matter to you? Select any that apply. RANDOMIZE UP TO DOESN'T MATTER

	Total	Women
Representation shapes how we're treated		63
Black women push for justice	49	59
Black women tell stories others ignore		48
It helps me feel seen		46
It doesn't matter to me	12	6

